Marion Edwin (CNZErg) ergonomist, of Optimise Ltd (www.optimiseltd.co.nz) reports that the Platform9 offers the 'away-from-desk' laptop user a range of alternative laptop-use positions fitting the general intent of current best practice for computer use. A number of positions are possible when reclining or lying in a couch, easy-chair or bed, with the handy mouse platform giving a useful alternative to laptop-mounted pointer controls. The Platform9 is likely to make laptop use more comfortable for many people, providing that attention is also given to break-taking practices and overall time using computers, and other hazards.
